TALK ABOUT IT NOW

The time to talk about foreign policy, as certain senators seem to have decided, is before tension straps a muzzle on free discussion.

The foreign policy of the United States is not clear, and now is the time to wonder why it isn't clear—not after some crisis resulting from its vagueness.

It is not clear even to those who should know most about it, with the possible exception of a few persons close to the White House and the state department, so it cannot be clear to the public.

Granted that the public's thinking seldom goes much further into foreign policy than a mental image of Old Glory unfurled at the top of a flagpole in some foreign land, with marines guarding the base of the flagpole, it still is important that the people should know in a general way what is being done.

They have been told that under the Roosevelt administration's slogan of "non-interference and non-intervention" military force no longer is the nub of foreign policy. Thus, though marines still exist, they do not guard the base of the flagpole in person.

The new setup calls for more statesmanship and less bugle blowing—the good neighbor policy, it is called. Just to make sure an old habit wouldn't assert itself, congress passed a neutrality law—to keep the country out of war. A sizable minority even tried to make war itself the subject of a referendum. That move was blocked; the neutrality law might as well have been blocked for all the effect it is having.

The fact is that, confronted with issues more momentous than those contained in dollar diplomacy in Central and South America, the Roosevelt administration evidently has decided to place foreign policy on a 24 hour basis, doing what needed to be done, but not keeping the country informed, through congress, about what it was doing.

Senators, anxiously mindful of their authority in this field, are resentful. They feel—some of them do, at least—that they should be taken into the confidence of the President and his secretary of state.

The people, though generally inclined to believe that foreign policy necessarily is determined by the executive, rather than by the senate, feel the same lack of information with regard to what may be going on behind the scenes. Ultimately, these matters must affect the whole country, particularly if they lead to war.

Specifically, the country needs to know how far from the traditional principle of isolation its government is prepared to go. It has entered the armaments race. There is talk of an "understanding" with Great Britain. It is widely known that the Japanese government and the Japanese people are construing such things as indications of hostility.

This government, in the opinion of its own citizens, is giving every appearance of trying to keep up with the Fighting Joneses while still committed officially to the proposition that the Joneses are heading for chaos on a downhill gallop. The usual explanation is that all preparations and actions are for national defense, but in this case the usual explanation, due probably to a disillusioning experience in 1917, leaves a lot to be explained.

The Senators asking for an explanation are performing a service.

GERMAN'S BIGGEST IF

The question of who is going to control the German army, the politicians or the officers, has flared up in the resignation of Marshal von Blomberg, Reichsfuehrer Hitler's war minister. Whatever the story behind the story may be, the story itself sounds like the most important European news of the week. Why?

Because dictatorship is established in the first place and is maintained always with military consent. The army is the king maker and the king destroyer in countries where politics simmers down to the fundamental issue of being destroyed by or destroying the opposition.

If Germany's regular army is getting itchy, Herr Hitler's days are numbered, and he knows it. Soldiers don't need to wait for a chance to vote, because they have guns. That's the chance every dictator must take.

ROCKINGCHAIR ATHLETES

It's terrifying to think of the sore muscles and thumping hearts caused unintentionally by Dr. Graeme M. Hammond, the New York octogenarian who paced off four miles this week to celebrate his 80th birthday.

Uncounted thousands of younger men, reading about this stunt, but forgetting that the doctor always has run for exercise, started immediately to exercise violently and to hope about to prove they were the fine specimens of manhood they hope they are.

Few of them, fortunately, will go any further than to make the discovery that the way to grow old gracefully is to keep on doing what you've always done, which in most cases means sticking to things that don't require extraordinary exertion, like sitting in a rockingchair and moving it slowly forward and backward.

THE STARS SAY:

For Saturday, February 5

Opportunity for progress and happiness is shown by this day's sidereal operations. There are auguries for advancement, favors or financial increase in employment or in business. There may be sudden developments in these which might call for a change, or a speculative enterprise may turn out surprisingly. In personal associations there may be very pleasant and profitable relations.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a very pleasant and progressive year, with promotion or favors in employment or in lucrative business operations, probably of a sudden nature. Speculation is promising. Also important contacts with high personages in either business or social affiliation may prove profitable and pleasant.

A child born on this day may be an original if unorthodox thinker, with ambitions that will attract good fortune and probably the indorsement of influential persons. His gracious and kindly nature may assure social popularity and standing.

O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Thoughts while strolling: For exquisite phrasing that sounds so casual, my vote to Ellen Glasgow. In a fog George Creel could pass for ex-King Alfonso. Captain Achmed Abdullah is a runner-up for George Arliss in expert handling of a monocle.

Goody, goody department: Lynn Fontaine chews gum, too. What the theatre needs is a few of the Belasco, Clyde Fitch and Bronson Howard touches. Put a spade-shaped beard on Louis Calhern and you have one of the ex-grand dukes of Russia. Heaven help us note: Peter Arno has a tweed tuxedo.

Add impossibilities: Finding a cop in Central Park, the new hold-up center. Who remembers when Frank Buck's picture was not on all the billboards? Every time Noel Coward publicity seems beamed, somebody prints that one about his approaching knight-hood.

Warren Pershing is a ringer for his illustrious dad. J. P. McEvoy and Morris Gest could trade hats without many noticing it. Most successful of the society singers: Eve Synington. She knows when to quit. Enzo Fiermonte sounds like a buzz saw hitting a knot. Study in dignity: Bernard Baruch.

Mrs. Buggs Baer and son "Buggie." Tony Canzoneri is one fighter who looks as though he had been fighting and not drinking pink tea. Truly a game little guy! Last of the vanishing courtesies: A Cartier salesman bows a lady all the way to her waiting limousine.

Crack newspaper artists go in for home building in a big way. The greatest splurge, of course, is the moated castle of Bob Ripley's in Connecticut. Then the town house of Rube Goldberg, nudging the Schwab mansion near the drive. And John T. McCutcheon's estate on a Pacific Island. Segar is building a $100,000 hacienda near Los Angeles from profits of his Popeye strip. Cliff McBride has a similar establishment at Altadena. So it goes.

Eyvind Earle, son of the once headlined love romanticist, Ferdinand Pinney Earle, is showing the artistic flair of his father. Recently he began a bicycle trip from Los Angeles to New York with a painting and camp outfit strapped to his back. He paid his way geyeping along and had time to do the choicest scenes on the way, all of which were displayed at a New York exhibit. Young Earle is adept at desert scenes, particularly in the Mojave Valley.

After a careful inspection of the news pictures and photographs of the society maids at Palm Beach and decorating the high chairs in various night clubs, my vote for youthful beauty and freshness goes to Eileen Stone, the hat-check and cigarette girl at El Morocco. If Ziegfeld were alive he would have had her long ago in the first line. Not only has she a dewy freshness but a regal stride suggesting Dolores and a way of moving about with eyes cast demurely down that stifles the usual pawing by drunks and bores. Indeed the entire front row of the old revue chorus could be easily recruited from the cigarette and hat check girls around town. There's one with a page boy bob at the Stork Club who keeps many customers' eyes off their lady friends when she passes along.

I used to watch Dolores practise her pantherine glide at rehearsals on the Midnight Frolic Roof. For hours she would walk about the stage and dance floor with books balanced on her head—sometimes a half dozen. It reminded me how I used to follow the set of the bricks for several blocks on the way to school. So ardently did I follow them I suspect that is why I have a pie-footed walk today.

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland
New York City

sociated with it. It is hoped a cure will ultimately be discovered.

A "hemophiliac" is an individual whose blood is incapable of clotting normally. If you cut your finger, or nick your face while shaving, bleeding occurs, but it stops within a few minutes. This is because a blood-clot forms at the point of injury and further flow of blood is prevented.

Called "Bleeders"

If a hemophiliac cuts himself, blood clotting may not occur for two or three hours. In some instances the bleeding may continue for a much longer period of time.

Sufferers from this disease are called "bleeders." The bleeding may come on at the most unexpected times. Bleeders must protect themselves constantly against stress and strain, and must be on guard against minor injuries, accidents; and the greatest care must be taken in operations. This is necessary because, as it will be seen, the slightest injury or accident may lead to prolonged and fatal bleeding.

The disease is hereditary. Once it occurs in a family, it will continue until that family has become extinct. Strange as it may seem, the condition is transmitted by the female but is never found in the female. It occurs only in the male. Although a daughter may inherit the disease, she herself will show no signs of the disease. But if she marries and has a male offspring, the child will very likely be afflicted with hemophilia.

Advances Made

As I have implied, certain advances have been made in the treatment of this disease. For example, severe bleeding has been controlled by the injection of a horse serum or of human blood. It is hoped that by the use of a special vaccine, it will be possible ultimately to control excessive bleeding. When that time comes it will serve to protect the lives of those unfortunate afflicted with hemophilia.

From time to time I meet a Pittsburgh man who always reads these articles. He has a son, a hemophiliac and, of course, has a vital interest in this subject. To him let me report that the research continues and has in it the prospect of ultimate success.

FAIRFIELD

THEATER Attractions

Jane Withers, Stuart Erwin and Una Merkel have the leading roles in the comedy, "Checkers," which shows tonight and Saturday at the State theater. Young Marvin Stephens has an important role as Jane's first screen heart interest.

Aunt Disapproves

Jane wants her aunt, Miss Merkel, to marry Erwin, but the aunt disapproves of Erwin's horseracing activities. Jane, as usual, tries to help Erwin and Una. The trouble starts when their beloved filly, "Blue Skies," wins an impromptu race, resulting in the rival jockey's losing his job. Marvin, the jockey, joins up with Jane and Stu, and the horse-loving trio, accompanied by the object of their affections, descends upon the farm of Una, who hates racing and race-horses—and people who like racing and race-horses.

Stu promises to sell the horse and Jane and Marvin vow never to return to the track. But Stu's courtship strikes a new snag in an unexpected rival, Andrew Tombs, the local banker. Furthermore Marvin gets a part-time job in Tombs' bank and develops a great interest in his daughter.

Anxious to set things right, Stu concocts a ruse which ends the banker's courtship as well as the jockey's. Marvin away from the bank and the daughter. But the ruse backfires, and Jane, Stu and Marvin are forced to enter "Blue Skies" in a race to save Una's farm.

At The Grand

At the Grand tonight and Saturday is a western film, taken from one of Zane Grey's stories, "Born to the West." John Wayne, John Mack Brown and Marsha Hunt have leading roles.

"Born to the West" concerns the fortunes of John Wayne and his saddle mate, Syd Saylor, a happy-go-lucky pair who drift into the Idaho cow country in quest of whatever excitement the country has to offer. They find it soon enough when they get mixed up in an attempt on the part of rustlers to make off with a herd.

In a nearby town Wayne comes upon a relative—a wealthy banker—who offers him either a job or money with which to get out of town. Wayne decides to take the money, but sees Marsha Hunt, his relative's sweetheart, and decides to remain.

Today's Good Deed

BRYN MAWR, Pa.—Two policemen here did their daily good deed — and put two women in the hospital.

It seems the ladies' car was stalled at the top of a hill and the policemen gave it a friendly push, just a little one.

The automobile careened down the incline, crashed into an electric light pole, snapped two high-tension wires and plunged the neighborhood in darkness.

The crestfallen cops took the women to a hospital.

Accused of Murder In Laborer's Death

FRESHFOLD, N. J., Feb. 4.—Blond Ebel Rounds, wed at 11 and a grandmother now at 37, was charged with murder today after all-night questioning concerning the shooting of a 40-year-old handyman who died in front of the deserted bar in her roadside tavern.

Arraigned before Justice of the Peace Fred Quinn of a complaint signed by State Police Corporal Edward O'Hare, she declared she was innocent and was held without bail for grand jury action.

"He grabbed the gun but I beat him to it," she told the court, and "it went off in my hand."

Her husband Frank, who said he married her when he was 23 and she "about 11," shoved aside police who tried to restrain him and, shouting "I want to kiss her," threw his arms around the thin, blue-eyed woman, haggard after a sleepless night.

Assistant Monmouth County Prosecutor Charles Frankel said Mrs. Rounds declared her relations with Edward Rooney, who was found sprawled dead in front of the bar last night, were "purely platonic."

An Asbury Park nurse, whom Frankel identified as Mrs. Norma Fisher, was "the other woman in the case," he said, adding she had told him of receiving an unsigned letter threatening bodily harm to Rooney.

Rooney and Mrs. Fisher, a widow with a son, planned to marry next month, Frankel said.

Chandler's P. T. A. Meetings Resumed

LISBON, Feb. 4.—An epidemic of chickenpox which forced discontinuance of the Chandler schools P. T. A. meetings two months ago, has subsided sufficiently to allow the Center township organization to plan a meeting Feb. 8.

"Social and Political Life in Norway" will be discussed on that date by Rev. Ray Klingaman, pastor of St. Jacob's Reformed church here. Rev. Klingaman will illustrate his speech with stereopticon views.

Mrs. Rachel Elliott will sing. A Valentine box social also is planned.

NEW PRESIDENT FOR O.S.U. LOOMS

Trustees, Largely Davey Appointees, May Act This Year to Supplant Dr. Rightmire

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Feb. 4.—A board of trustees, the majority appointees of Gov. Martin L. Davey, may name a new president of Ohio State university this year.

Davey's unexpected nomination of Carlton S. Dargusch of Columbus to succeed Lawrence E. Laybourne of Springfield on the seven-member board provided the newest link today in the chain of circumstances leading to the expected retirement of President George W. Rightmire.

It has been the custom for Ohio State's presidents to retire at the age of 70 years. Dr. Rightmire, head of the country's sixth largest university for the past 11 years, will be 70 on Nov. 15.

Friends of Dr. Rightmire, who joined the university faculty in 1902, have said privately that he would like to retain the presidency several years longer.

Dr. Rightmire has declined to discuss whether he would seek to circumvent custom.

Dargusch's nomination, three months before Laybourne's term expires, was sent to the senate yesterday for confirmation.

The senate, now in recess, will reconvene next Tuesday and is scheduled to adjourn sine die Feb. 28. If Dargusch is not confirmed before then, Laybourne, whose term expires May 13, will continue to serve until a successor is qualified.

LISBON, Feb. 4.—A check for $15,909, representing the first payment by the government on the combined auditorium-gymnasium under construction on the high school grounds here, was received Thursday afternoon by George Porter, clerk of the board of education.

The payment represents 48 percent of the government's share, totaling $28,936. The school district by voting a bond issue last March at a special election was able to secure PWA assistance. Work on the building was started the forepart of December.

Vegetable growers from both counties will attend this series of discussions.

"GIVE HER WINGS" by MARIE BLIZARD

CHAPTER XXXIV

So Elsa Herford thought Julie Allerdice was not a flyer! Glimping the stick, gluing her eyes to the dash, keeping them from the slumped figure ahead of her, Julie gritted her teeth and forced her memory to serve her. She shut out everything but Pete Waddell's face. Pete's voice saying:

"Come down in the wind. Watch for smoke to see what the direction is."

There was nothing to be seen for all that the night was splashed with moonlight. The stars were uncomfortably close and the earth dangerously drawing her down. She couldn't stay up there all night, or even until Paul came to. If he ever did.

She hoped she hadn't killed him. It was not a sentimental hope. At the moment she had thoughts for nothing save landing safely and landing had been the most difficult part of flying for her to learn.

The wind blew her hair in four directions. There was no information regarding the direction of the wind to be gleaned from that source. She had seen a bit of comedy acting in a movie in which a seaman had wet his finger and held it up in the air to determine the direction of the wind. She tried it and met the rush of air from the propellers.

It occurred to her that there was the simple expedient of looking at the tree tops.

She looked out leaning over the side of the cockpit. The air nearly tore the hair from her head. But she could see the tree tops blowing toward the east. She fixed her eye on a bright star to set the direction having no idea where they were except that she had been constantly circling about at an even level. They couldn't be far from Pennbrook.

Her recollection of the land about Pennbrook was not reassuring. There were meadows but they were few and far between. Her eyes strained against the night hoping by some miracle to see a beacon light to guide her to a landing field. She'd heard there were so many on the Island, pictured them the way you picture a succession of gasoline stations along a highway.

No bright light gleamed and flickered below her she saw many small lights twinkling, twinkling dangerously. Suppose she fell in the villages?

Another fear assailed her and she glanced at the fuel meter but it meant nothing to her.

She was flying at five hundred feet, dropped a hundred feet and locked over the side again. At first she thought she was dreaming, had seen a mirage. Those twin white lights, the big sign-board! The sign board was on the highway directly opposite the gate to Pennbrook. Those two small lights were the gate lights. She circled and made out other lights. Lights of the house, and a few hundred yards away the lights of the garage. Directly back of the garage was the level meadow.

If only now she could make it! She closed her eyes before she went into her glide.

Oh, Lord, she prayed, if only You'll let me make it, I'll tell them about not having any money. I'll never do anything like that again in my life. Only yet me get Mr. Lombard's plane back without cracking it up. And please, please, have Paul be all right!

Then she opened her eyes and partially throttled her engine. The nerves at the back of her neck were like taut wires from the intensity of her concentration. She was calling Pete's advice out of time.

"Take it easy," his voice came back to her. "The important thing is not to lose your head."

"Yes," she said as though he were there. "But what do I do?"

"Drop the nose slightly."

She dropped the nose. At about three hundred feet, she closed the throttle. Her lesson was coming back to her and she relaxed a trifle.

She held the plane steady during the glide, trying to pierce the darkness and see the ground below. She was beginning to appreciate what a flying sense was and to know that she didn't have it. She hoped she was about thirty feet above the ground—basing her hope on the height of the garage on which she kept her eye before she circled around it.

Then she flattened, gripped the control stick to pull it back gently. It worked at first and she felt the plane strike the bumping earth. She tried to slow down, lost her head and saw that they were heading straight for the garage. She couldn't get direction!

She thought she heard directions, people shrieking at her. No longer sure of anything. She only knew that this was a terrible nightmare. This white thing rushing toward her to crush her. She wondered if she had imagined she had landed, if perhaps she hadn't been flying on her side and they were crashing.

That was all she knew. She never expected to open her eyes again. When she tried, to they brushed against gauze. The effort made her head ache. Her limbs, under the effect of a powerful bromide, felt disembodied. Her arms lay straight at her sides. She moved her fingers against silk. It was the silk of the lounge on which she lay in Nancy's library but she didn't know that. Or how long she had been there. She opened her mouth to speak and found the effort too much.

In the darkness some of the horror came back to her. She wasn't dead, she was questionably relieved to discover. But what had happened to her? To Paul?

The nightmare became painfully acute. Her debt and the crack-up mingled in terrifying proportions. She tried to think of something pleasant. Like sunlight on the quarry pool. Althea unpacking a picnic lunch. Tommy ducking her head under water. The two of them having a water battle. Tommy jeering at her because she was a little girl, then wiping her tears away. Tommy bringing her a box of stale candy the day she graduated from high school. Tommy, who never liked her, saying she was a little fool because she wanted excitement. Tommy had no business to call her a little fool even if she was one. Tommy never tried to find out what she was like.

Weak tears dribbled out under her eye-lids making the gauze stick to them.

Her reflexes jumped when she heard a soft knock on a door somewhere. She heard the door open.

Elsa's voice said very softly, "Paul, why don't you go to bed? The doctor says she'll be all right in the morning."

Paul's voice was very soft. A sick-room voice. "Don't wait up any longer darling. I've got to stick it out."

"How's your head?" There was a pause. "Paul, you've got a lump the size of an egg on it! What did the doctor say?"

"Of course he's sore." Julie lay without breathing, listening.

"Now, tell me about it."

"The little fool lost her head." —Julie swallowed hard—"I was all right. She thought it would be a cute idea to take a ride in the moonlight. I'd had a couple of drinks but that's just between you and me. I don't want to lose my license. I'm going in the race to Miami next week. That's what got me bothered. I can't take the responsibility for this whole thing."

"Don't worry about it, my pet. You won't have to. Nancy had her well sized up as an opportunist."

"Not so loud!" Paul cautioned in an undertone.

"She's sound asleep. Dr. Kerry gave her a strong bromide. She's got a little cut on her head where she struck the dash. Maybe it will teach her a lesson."

"It's taught me one but it's damned embarrassing and annoying all the same. What's Stanley say about it?"

"Very little. He knows that you're not to blame. You can't blame him for being annoyed at having his pet plane cracked up. It will be an expensive repair job."

Julie saw herself in debtor's prison for the rest of her life.

"I'll pay for it," Paul said shortly.

"You're sweet! And gallant!" Julie had other ideas.

"You're a swell person to see it my way," Paul said.

"Every time I go away you get in trouble," Elsa said tenderly. "What am I going to do about you?"

"Marry me and take care of me. I said I wasn't ever going to ask you again when you turned me down last time but I'm putting it up to you now."

Elsa sighed, "I'm afraid I'll have to, or you'll fall into the hands of one of these baby-faced gold diggers yet."

Julie shut her ears against what she heard next.

In a little while, Elsa said, "I hear a car in the drive now. That would be Dr. Kerry's nurse. Do you think the two of you can carry her upstairs? The doctor said it would be all right after she'd had a little sleep. It's nearly four now."

For the last time Julie, feigning unconsciousness, felt Paul's arms around her as he carried her up the stairs and into her own room. After that she slept. When she woke in the morning there was a nurse at her bedside. A disgustedly cheerful nurse who took off the bandage, washed the cut on her forehead and said cheerfully, "You won't even need another bandage on it. There are only four stitches and the air will heal the wound. You had a narrow escape but you're almost as good as new this morning."

She was new enough, she thought when she was alone. She thought she'd stay in bed all day, avoid meeting the others and at night she would tell Nancy that she was leaving as soon as she was able to.

In her wildest imagination she was unable to visualize what actually happened.

Nancy came to her when the nurse left at noon. She was politely sympathetic and assured by Julie that she was quite all right—Julie stumbled through apologies for which she had not adequate words—she said coldly, "I've had Molly pack your things. I know that you will be anxious to get home. There's a train at six. Wilkins will take you to the train. You're sure you feel strong enough?"

Julie had forgotten to say that of course she would leave as soon as she was well. Nancy hadn't given her a chance to say it.

Julie's lips were white with the effect of the insult.

She said "Yes, thank you. If you'll excuse me to the others, I won't see them again."

Shooting Climaxes Massachusetts Hospital Inquiry

Mack was admitted to the institution in October, 1937, but officials said he had been "in and out of the infirmary several times before that."

The shooting capped a dramatic climax to investigation of a mounting total of violent deaths in Massachusetts mental hospitals. Police discovered last week that violent deaths since 1926 totalled more than 500, including eight slayings of patients by other inmates.

Aides of State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley, who uncovered the killings during a check of hospital records, said weapons ranged from pickaxes to fists.

State police detectives, ordered to investigate all hospitals by Gov. Charles F. Burley, found 434 patients died from other than natural causes between 1926 and 1936, and reported 118 additional "sudden deaths" during 1937.

Probes Administration

A legislative commission began investigation of the entire problem of hospital control, and Chairman Patrick J. Moynihan, of the state commission on administration and finance, began an inquiry into business administration of the institutions.

Five of the slayings occurred at Medfield State hospital and the other three at Danvers hospital. Officials of the mental diseases department, which supervises the institutions, pointed out they were overcrowded 16 per cent beyond capacity.

MOOSE SPANKED BY COLUMBIANS IN LEAGUE TILT

Kaiser Scores 16 Points To Star In Class A Loop Game

Registering their second straight victory in the Class A league's second round game, the Columbians trounced the Moose, 23 to 13, at the Memorial building court last night.

The Columbians came from behind to gain the victory after trailing by two points at the close of the second and third quarters.

A last quarter spurt produced 12 points for the Columbians while the Moose were held scoreless.

Jerome Kaiser carried off individual honors in the contest, leading the Columbians final period rally and scoring 16 points on six field goals and four free throws.

Two Class B games were played last night, the Columbians "B" team winning the one and Reich's Trojans taking the other.

The Columbians B's spanked the Saxons, 33 to 21, for their second win of the Class B league's second round. It was the second loss of the round for the Saxons.

Belan, Handlick and J. Rogers starred for the Columbians, collecting 25 of their team's 33 points. Belan led the individual scoring with 10 points.

The Columbians held the edge throughout the contest and were up in front 14 to 9 at halftime.

Reich's Trojans were extended the limit to squeeze out a 19 to 17 victory over the Methuonists. The contest was nip and tuck from the start with the lead changing hands frequently.

The score was tied at 11-all at the close of the third period after the Trojans had led a one-point edge, 9 to 8, at halftime.

Mike Oana set the scoring pace for the Reich quintet, hooping five field goals and one free throw for 13 points.

A scheduled Class B game between the Baptists and Christians was won by the Baptists on a forfeit.

SALEM, WARREN TO PLAY HERE NEXT TUESDAY

Quakers Take On Strong Massillon Quint In Game Tonight

Revenge for their worst defeat of the 1936-37 season will be sought by Coach Herb Brown's Salem High school Quakers tonight when they take on the speedy and clever Massillon Tigers at the North Lincoln ave. gymnasium.

The Quakers fell before the Tigers, 45 to 9, last season in the most disastrous game of an otherwise successful campaign. The defeat was the most decisive ever handed a Brown-coached quintet.

As additional incentive for victory, the Quakers will be out to boost their stock in Ohio scholastic basketball rankings. The Tigers are currently rated No. 1 in the state and a win for the Quakers would go a long way in establishing Salem as a leading contender for district and state tournament honors.

Blocking the Quakers path to easy victory is the fast-breaking Massillon offensive attack, which has proved the downfall of eight of the Tigers nine opponents so far this season.

Massillon's starting lineup will include Bob McDade and Paul Herman at forwards, Kenneth Everett at center and Ed Miglich and Ed Huth at guards. All of the Tiger first stringers are small, but to make up for this disadvantage they are fast, clever and aggressive.

Oille Oleva, Jim Dickey, Max Lutsch, Gilbert Everhart and Bill Schaeffer are slated to get the starting call for the Quakers.

The game will start at 8:30 following a reserve contest between Salem and Massillon subs. The reserve tilt will get under way at 7:30. P. B. Lofach of Akron will officiate the main game.

Re-scheduling of the Salem-Warren basketball game for Tuesday night of next week was announced today by Faculty Manager Frederick E. Cope.

The game was postponed from Friday, Jan. 28, because of the death of Judy Hill, seven-year old daughter of Pierre Hill, Warren coach.

Cope said that holders of season booklets will be admitted to the Warren game free, even if they used their original Warren ticket for admission to the Brookfield game. Other tickets purchased for the Jan. 28 contest will also be honored, Cope said.

Permission to hold the Warren game here Tuesday was received yesterday from H. R. Townsend, state athletic commissioner, who must rule on the scheduling of mid-week contests.

Cope also announced that there is a chance that the Boardman game which was postponed early in the season, may be re-scheduled if an agreement can be made with Coach Lowell Allen of Boardman.

Plan Amateur Fight Show For Memorial Wednesday

Eight Bouts Scheduled for Simon-Pure Card Which Will Be Sponsored by Jimmy Perry

Plans for the first amateur boxing show to be presented in Salem in several years were being made today by Jimmy Perry, former Alliance boxer, who recently opened an athletic club here.

Perry, a veteran of many ring battles and one of the outstanding featherweights in the district a number of years ago, plans to present his show at the Memorial building, Wednesday, Feb. 9.

The card will include eight bouts, featuring amateur sluggers from Salem, East Palestine, Alliance and possibly New Brighton, Pa. Perry, who has lived in Salem for about three years, working at the National Sanitary Co., received his license from the Salem Boxing Commission yesterday.

The show is expected to feature a bout between Don West, sensational young Salem battler, who has scored two straight knockout victories in the past month, and Enoch Henry, leading amateur slugger of East Palestine.

In addition to West, several other Salem amateurs are scheduled to appear in the show. The complete card is expected to be announced tomorrow.

Breezy Briefs Of Sport From Briezt To You

(Pinch-Hitting for Eddie Briezt)
NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Al Schacht is moaning low . . . figures he could make $100,000 this year if he had time for all the bids pouring in . . . as it is, he'll have to be satisfied with a mere 40 G's for 130 games . . . which is really putting clowning on a paying basis . . . don't be surprised if the Giants and Cardinals still do some trading business . . . Bill Terry likes young Herb Bremer, and the Gas House Gang is going to find a lot of use for a catcher like Gus Mancuso . . . our Cunnel Eddie Briezt is laid up by a touch of old man winter . . .

Cunnel Briezt's tip on big things about to break at Duke has the whole south guessing . . . don't worry about poor old Bill Hallahan getting his release from the Cincinnati Reds . . . he was only wild in his pitching, and the grapevine says his handbook can strangle any wolf at the door . . . GOLDEN GLOVES TOURNEY FINAL BOUNTS TONIGHT

Cities Other than Cleveland Represented In Title Battles

CLEVELAND, Feb. 4. — Cities other than Cleveland were well represented today in the list of finalists in the Cleveland Golden Gloves boxing tournament. The Plain Dealer's annual fistfights show will end with the title bouts tonight.

Patrick Murphy, a U. S. Marine from Youngstown, took a split-decision last night in a semi-final bout from Canton's Lou Rice. The judges' decision was divided after the 147-pounders ended their spirited battle — and Murphy won on points gained, apparently, by a four-second knockdown in the initial round.

Alonso Brooks, of Akron A. C., Akron, fighting in the same weight class, won by a decision over Elmer Harris, of Cleveland.

Murphy and Brooks clash for the tournament laurels in the finals. Dan Canalis, of Mickey A. C., Lorain, who starred two years ago as a novice in the Golden Gloves shows, sent Lou Dell, of Cleveland, in the bantam class. Canalis is to meet Pee Wee Barnes, of Cleveland, in the final tilt.

William Muldane, of Cleveland, scored a third round knockout over Johnnie Kochan, of Korat A. C., Lorain, in the 175-pound semi-finals.

Tommy Je Roy, of Mickel A. C., Lorain, trounced Frank J. Nestor, of Grand River, in the 147-pound division's quarter-finals, only to lose by a decision to Ralph Eustice, of Cleveland, in the semi-finals.

Wins Field Trial

ALBANY, Ga., Feb. 4. — Mississippi Broomhill Jake, owned and handled by B. C. Goss of Cincinnati, today held the all-age stake cup of the southern amateur field trials won by working three covers of birds during Wednesday heats of the event. He is a brown and white pointer.

Frascella Held To Lowest Score Of Current Season

Wooster Ace Limited To 16 Points As Scots Defeat Heidelberg Student Princes, 64-48

COLUMBUS, Feb. 4. — Sixteen points in a single game constitutes a "big night" for most college basketball players, but when the Student Princes of Heidelberg "stopped" Nick Frascella of Wooster at that total last night it was the lowest score the scintillating Scot had been held to in an Ohio conference tilt this season.

The Trenton, N. J., flash has won four of the Wooster league games single-handed, outscoring the entire opposing team in each tilt.

Last night he was able to get but one-fourth his team's total, and one-third as many as the student princes, as the Scots won 64 to 48 to retain top place in the circuit with six straight victories.

Have a look at Frascella's conference record for the year:

AGAINST	PG	FT	TP	Score
Ashland	15	8	38	(69-24)
Mt. Union	6	6	18	(38-34)
Denison	14	5	33	(76-31)
Oberlin	15	4	34	(72-33)
Ashland	15	1	31	(71-28)
Heidelberg	5	6	16	(64-48)
Totals	70	30	170

That mark of 170 points in six league games gives Frascella an average of 28.3 per contest. His closest competitor in the Ohio conference is Paul Weaver, Capital's pastor-sophomore, who has a 15.9 average for eight contests. Shannon of Wittenberg is on Weaver's heels with 15.7.

Rivlin of Marshall heads the buckeye conference point-getters with an 18.7 average for four games, with his team mate, Watson, in second place with 12.5.

Seventeen Ohio conference players and six in the Buckeye are maintaining an average of 10 or more points per game, eight Ohio conference colleges failing to land a man in the select list while only the last-place Dayton club of the Buckeye is on the "outside."

LEE TO BATTLE FRED APOSTOLI

Mid-Western Fighter To Meet Conqueror Of Freddie Steele

NEW YORK, Feb. 4. — The mid-weight situation already complicated, has a chance to get completely out of control tonight when Glen Lee, a tough little mug from the mid-west, tackles Fred Apostoli, the "uncrowned champ," in a 12-rounder at the Garden.

It's reported, though not confirmed, that Apostoli, who recently bashed out the champion, Freddie Steele, in an over-weight affair, has refused to lay his share of the "title" on the line. That is the San Francisco thumper insists upon retaining the "uncrowned champ," whatever happens tonight.

Though it doesn't make much sense, Apostoli's stand is fully as logical as anything connected with the middleweights lately. If Lee wins, as he stands a good chance of doing, then it's up to him to think up another title.

Lee is something of a newcomer around here, but he made a powerful impression in beating Walter Woods, a local favorite, and knocking out Harry Balsamo.

The betting has been 3 to 1 on Apostoli, which is natural considering the fact he has stopped seven of his last eight opponents, including the champion.

The battle should prove, at least, whether Apostoli really is the terrific fighter he appeared to be against Steele. If he knocks out this tough youngster Lee, or even licks him decisively, the boxing fathers doubtless will renew their pressure on Steele to meet him in a title match. If Lee wins, you can have the middleweight situation.
